

Benefits of a Fair Parenting Community

Public resources for treating or incarcerating poorly socialized children are reduced.

Healthier communities with less conflict.

Much more efficient to accommodate separated parents and their children.

Every family on the Fair Parenting Plan saves time and driving expenses with best practices transfers; and communities enjoy less traffic and pollution.

More children are available for community sports and activities and more parents are available for adult groups or employment. The community is more robust and active.

Grandparents and friends can always keep track of children's schedules.

Employers enjoy more consistency and can more easily accommodate a common Fair Parenting schedule.

At-risk children are integrated into important activities and services.

Public resources for resolving scheduling disputes are saved.

Self-satisfaction is increased and personal stress is decreased with providing a tried and true solution for the children involved.
